ABSTRACT

This study aims to analyze the relevance of implementing the Sam'iyah Syafawiyah method in improving vocabulary mastery in Arabic language learning among Alpha Generation students in Grade I at MIS Tarbiyah Tebas for the academic year 2025–2026. The Sam'iyah Syafawiyah method is a language teaching method that emphasizes listening activities (sam'iyah) and speaking activities (syafawiyah) as the foundation of language mastery. This method is considered relevant for Alpha Generation students, who are characterized as active, visual-oriented, and more likely to understand material through direct activities and communicative interaction. This research uses a qualitative research design with a case study approach. Data collection techniques were conducted through observation, interviews, and documentation. The data sources in this study included the Arabic language teacher, Grade I students, and learning documents related to the implementation of the method. The collected data were then analyzed using data reduction, data display, and conclusion drawing techniques to determine the effectiveness and relevance of the Sam'iyah Syafawiyah method in improving students' vocabulary mastery. The results of the study show that the implementation of the Sam'iyah Syafawiyah method can gradually improve students' vocabulary mastery through listening, imitating, and practicing vocabulary orally in the learning context. In addition, this method is able to increase students' active participation, facilitate the understanding of new vocabulary, and create a more communicative and interactive learning atmosphere. Therefore, the Sam'iyah Syafawiyah method is considered relevant and effective for use in Arabic language learning for Alpha Generation students at the madrasah ibtidaiyah level.
